The authors regret to inform that two errors occurred in the printed version of this paper.

First, on page 148, “One in four women received epidural analgesia.” should read: “Three in four women received epidural analgesia.”

Second, on page 152,

“The sub-themes Experiencing physical distress and

Being affected by care providers' and partner's behaviour were also common, with >8 of 10 (83 %, 82 %) of the women having these experiences.”

should read:

“The sub-themes Experiencing physical distress and Being affected by care providers' and partner's behaviour were also common, with more than 8 of 10 (83%, 82%) of the women having these experiences.”

The authors would like to apologise for any inconvenience caused.
